The crew with waited in silence. From ever toward Camp Mills came the strains of a hand playing and the strains, tramp, tramp of marching men. Then Colonel Hine, Lieutenant Colonel Red and Captain Doyle, the regimental adjutant, hove cite sight around a bend in the read, their horses galloping.
Close behind them was the beginning of a long line of khaki clad men. And a ripple of applause came from the speciators.

Colonel Hine and his staff took their places at the edge of the grounds. Standing directly behind them were Generals Mann, Lenhan and Hoyle. Then came the visitors, packed solid. The long line of soldiers wound slowly across the plains. The olive drab uniforms were almost indiscernible against the greenish yellow of the plains.

The men stretched out in hattalion formation and went through retreat exercises.

CAMP MILLS, L. L. Sept. 16.—Twenty thousand visitors at Camp Mills saw the 165th Infantry—the old 69th New York—parade in full strength this afternoon. The spectacle, an impressive one, was staged on the Nassau County Fair Grounds, a mile from camp.

It was the first time the Irish command formally paraded in its entirety since that day a month ago when the men of the old 69th haid good by to Manhattan and passed down Fifth Are much of the first time since the unit has been encamped here.

The Tie That Binds

The sert of thing that is binding efficers and men into a fraternity is typified in an incident that occurred this afternoon in one of the engineer barracks.

To the captain came a "first paper" Swiss of the draft. The Swiss had just received a telegram informing him that his wife had arrived from the other side, but was detained on Ellis Island. "I must get to the city and look after her," said the rookie.

The captain wrote him a leave, and the man saluted and started away. He

American people during the war were described to-day by Henry P. Davison, chairman of the War Council of the American National Red Cross, and George Creel, chairman of the United States Bureau of Information.

For Their First Time

Two hundred privates in the Rainhow Division at Camp Mills, who have been drilling in the shadow of New York, the city of their dreams, yesterday journeyed to the city and went sightseeing. Their trip was arranged by the National Service Committee appointed by Raymond D. Fosdick and the Mayor's Committee on National Defence.

The visitors were enlisted men in the 168th Infantry of Iowa, the 149th Machine Gun Battalion of Georgia.

In five buses they drove from the Pennsylvania station to Bowling Green. They were guests at noon at a luncheon given in their honor at the caféteria of the Young Women's Christian Association, Fifty-second Street and Lexington Avenue.
